

Phu Nguyen

I went through each cell in the notebook and ran it to see how it worked, like loading the wine data, splitting it, and training the two models. I paid attention to the outputs, like the accuracy scores and the confusion matrix, so I could understand what each step was doing. Then I filled in the reflection questions to the best of my ability, using what I saw from the results and what I learned in the lab.